

Content Creation

Part of Digital Marketing Essentials · Estimated time: 35 min

Introduction

Good marketing content earns attention rather than demanding it — which comes down to specific, concrete writing more than clever phrasing.

Core ideas

- A headline's only job is to earn the next sentence — it doesn't need to say everything, just enough to make someone want to keep reading.
- Every piece of content should point toward one clear next action (read more, sign up, reply) rather than several competing ones.
- Specific, concrete claims ("loads in under one second") are more persuasive and more memorable than vague ones ("lightning-fast").
- Editing for length usually helps more than editing for cleverness — cutting unnecessary words keeps the reader's attention on what matters.

Try it yourself

Take a piece of marketing copy you've written or seen with a vague claim ("great customer service", "high quality") and rewrite it as one specific, concrete claim instead.

Further reading

- CoSchedule — How to Write a Blog Post

<https://coschedule.com/blog/how-to-write-a-blog-post>

- Copyblogger — Content Marketing

<https://copyblogger.com/content-marketing/>

ModuloTrainer reading material — return to the app to mark this module complete.